DETAILED ACTION

Minor Informalities

- 1. The Applicant is required to submit a substitute specification, because the current specification has hole punches that inhibit one from reading the top pages of the specification.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

- 3. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

- 4. Claims 12-15, 18, 27-30, 33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. Claims 12-15, 18, 27-30, and 33 are rejected under 112 1st, for the limitations, "automatically receiving from the program applet the embedded password without manual entry of the password by a user, for authentication whenever the receiving occurs". The specification does not describe or contain, limitations, "automatically receiving from the program applet the embedded password without manual entry of the password by a user, for authentication whenever the receiving occurs". The specification discloses the client sending a request for an applet to the server via the network.(see pg. 11).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

6. Claims 12-14, 18, 27-29, and 33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Scherpbier(6,263,365).

7. As per claim 12, 18, 27, Scherpbier discloses providing a program applet(22) with a password embedded therewith to a client computer via a network, the password having a limited operational life(see col. 4, lines 45-49); receiving from the program applet via the network a request for information stored in a restricted access storage area of a server computer(see col. 3, lines 55-67, col. 4, lines 1-15); automatically receiving from the program applet the embedded password, for authentication (whenever the receiving occurs(see col. 4, lines 47-49); authenticating the embedded password by the server computer(i.e. control module) and not by the program applet, whenever the receiving occurs(see col. 4, lines 49-51), thereafter providing the information to the program applet via the network while the embedded password is valid(see col. 4, lines 55-67, col. 5, lines 1-5); and invalidating the embedded password coincident with an invalidation event(see col. 4, lines 47-54). Also, as per claim 27, a password generator is inherent in Scherpbier, because Scherpbier discloses a password, and that the applet transmits the password to the server in order to perform authentication (see col. 4, lines 47-55).

Art Unit: 2131

8. As per claims 13, 28, Scherpbier discloses wherein the invalidating includes invalidating the embedded password at a predetermined time, because the time is when the pilot applet(22) of Scherpbier is used to create a flight creation, the applet is then authenticated by the server, if the password is invalid, the flight is not created(see col. 4, lines 44-55).

9. As per claims 14, 29, Scherpbier discloses wherein the invalidating includes invalidating the embedded password after lapse of a predetermined time from when the request was received(see col. 4, lines 44-55).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

10. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

11. Claims 15 and 30, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Scherpbier.

12. As per claims 15, 30, the Examiner takes Official Notice that it is well-known in the art of networking to invalidate a password upon detection of a loss of communication with the client; therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to include invalidating a password upon detection of a loss of communication with the client, the motivation is that the password can be intercepted and used by another client on the network, if the password is not invalidated.

Response to Amendment

13. The Applicant states that Scherpbier discloses assigning a password to a user, namely the user of the pilot computer. Thus, the Applicant states that Scherpbier does not disclose a password embedded in the applet. The Examiner disagrees with the Applicant. Scherpbier does not disclose a user entering a password. Scherpbier discloses a flight creation applet enables the pilot computer to transmit the user name and password of the user of the pilot computer, and the control module determines whether the username and password are valid(see col. 4, lines 44-51). If the code is transmitted, the code is embedded in the applet, at the time of transmission(see col. 3, lines 3-6, col. 4, lines 44-51). If the Applicant has a more specific feature that the Applicant wants to claim, than the Applicant should do so. The claims are to be interpreted broadly in light of the specification.
